

My Instagram account (@realasitgethiphop) is currently being targeted by a bad-faith scammer, utilizing Instagram's "good faith" copyright system, for purposes of financial extortion. After posting promotional content for a major label artist (NBA Youngboy) —which is standard practice within my professional network—I was hit with a copyright violation by an individual demanding a $1,000 "ransom" payment for a retraction. A detailed timeline is outlined below, and supporting screenshots of our email and message exchanges are attached and labeled.

Timeline: Copyright Claims, Attempted Extortion and Retaliatory Strikes

March 28: Strike 1 Received

- A copyright strike was issued against a transformative meme I created using an image originally published by the recording artist NBA YoungBoy. Based on my professional experience collaborating with digital marketers associated with the artist's label, utilizing such assets from an artist's page is considered an industry "best practice." Labels and marketing teams actively encourage the circulation of these images through creator content to maximize artist reach and maintain cultural relevance.
 - Content: NBA YoungBoy photo (True Owner: @nba_youngboy)
 - Report ID: #774511548820362
 - Claimant Email: metrodepts@outlook.com

March 31: Initial Contact, Extortion Attempt and Appeal to Instagram

- I contacted the claimant via the provided email to seek a retraction, and they directed me to Telegram. The claimant demanded $1,000 USD to restore the post.
- When I requested proof of ownership of the photo, the claimant threatened additional strikes in order to have my account deleted. Within hours of my refusal to pay, they followed through by filing two additional fraudulent strikes (Reports #1969030057053694 and #830018282743641).
 - Strike 2: Tobey Maguire & girlfriend AI Photo (True Owner: @antbeale_).
 - Report ID: #1969030057053694.
 - Claimant Email: snkultra@outlook.com
 - Strike 3: 21 Savage & Latto AI photo (True Owner: @mrbankzzzz).
 - Report ID: #830018282743641
 - Claimant Email: stargossip07@outlook.com
- I subsequently filed an appeal through Instagram's internal reporting system; however, the response I received recommended direct resolution between the involved parties. This response did not take into account that the claimant is a fraudulent actor utilizing the platform to facilitate financial extortion. This is NOT a legitimate content owner and has ignored all requests to provide proof of ownership.

April 1 to Present: Additional Requests for Support from Instagram

- Since March 31, I have filed an additional appeal; it was denied due to insufficient supporting documentation (screenshot 19). I subscribed to Meta Verified, and initiated numerous chats attempting to find a path forward. In each instance, my support representative told me simply to file additional appeals. Clearly, no one I was dealing with understood the situation in its entirety in order to provide a path forward that would allow me to come to a satisfactory resolution. The benefit of the doubt was given to the claimant regardless of content ownership status.
- With regard to the actual content in question, I reached out via email to each of the TRUE copyright owners. I have received explicit permission from Tobey McGuire to use the content (Screenshot 18). The other two owners have not responded to my email requests.

Additional Points for Consideration

- In my experience, the claimant's requirement that we migrate our conversation to Telegram represented a significant deviation from standard industry practice. I have found that legitimate rights holders and professional IP protection agencies typically communicate exclusively via official email to maintain a verifiable paper trail, particularly when managing assets for an artist of NBA Youngboy's stature, for example. By moving to an encrypted messaging platform, the claimant obscured their identity and location, as their Telegram profile lacked any verifiable area code or country association. Furthermore, based on my observations of legitimate enforcement entities, the absence of an official business domain or website underscores the questionable nature of this claim and suggests a deliberate effort to bypass the transparency and accountability built into Instagram's reporting system.
- In my initial Telegram communication, I provided a concise recap of our previous email correspondence to maintain a consistent record of the dispute. During this exchange, I documented the claimant abruptly changing their account handle from @geng0official (see screenshots 3 +4) to @ykyouaredeadsoon (see screenshots 5-10). Since that point, they have changed their telegram handle again to @sharfmind (see screenshot 17). Such frequent identity shifts display a pattern of behavior that points to fraud. It is characteristic of bad-faith scammers who are attempting to obscure their digital footprint and evade detection while targeting multiple victims. The account's profile imagery kept changing as well; this does not happen with legitimate corporate entities and/or authorized legal representatives for the artists in question.
- In subsequent Telegram correspondence, the claimant explicitly demanded a $1,000 USD payment in exchange for a retraction, an ultimatum I refused pending legal proof of their ownership of the content. Rather than providing this proof, the claimant escalated the situation by threatening to disable my account through additional strikes—a threat they ultimately executed by filing two more fraudulent reports and providing screenshots of the successful submissions as a form of intimidation. The attached evidence, including the claimant's own internal submission receipts, confirms a direct correlation between the extortionist and the emails associated with all three reports: metrodepts@outlook.com, snkultra@outlook.com, and stargossip07@gmail.com (see screenshots 9-16). The use of these consistent email domains and the claimant's inadvertent documentation of the filing process establish a clear "modus operandi," proving they are the sole operator behind this unified campaign. Furthermore, while the claimant has frequently altered their Telegram handle to evade accountability and obscure their digital footprint, the underlying message history remains consistent, confirming that these are not individual IP disputes but a single, fraudulent extortion scheme designed to weaponize Instagram's reporting system for financial gain.
- Lastly, I have identified the true owners of the content itself, which is true evidence that these strikes are false. The true owners can be found above under the "Timeline" section. I have received permission to post the AI photo of Tobey McGuire and his girlfriend. See screenshot below.

Current Status

Despite having Meta Verified support, I am stuck in a procedural loop:

- Standard Appeals: Have been rejected despite evidence of extortion.
- DMCA Counter-Notifications: The current form theoretically prevents me from filing because I am not the content "owner". However, this is not 100% true. While the original content is not mine, I have added to it for purposes of engagement and artist promotion. As mentioned earlier, this is generally considered to be industry best practice as it boosts artist recognition, and subsequently their ability to make money. Further, the claimant is absolutely NOT the owner, and has no right to claim that they are.

- Support Limitation: Support agents continue to suggest "working it out" with the claimant, which would not only require me to succumb to a $1,000 scam, but would set me up for further extortion. There would be no guarantees that the scammer's behavior would stop, or that they would cease from holding my account hostage. The suggestion to "work it out" puts scammers in the driver's seat, and penalizes dedicated account holders instead.

Conclusion & Request

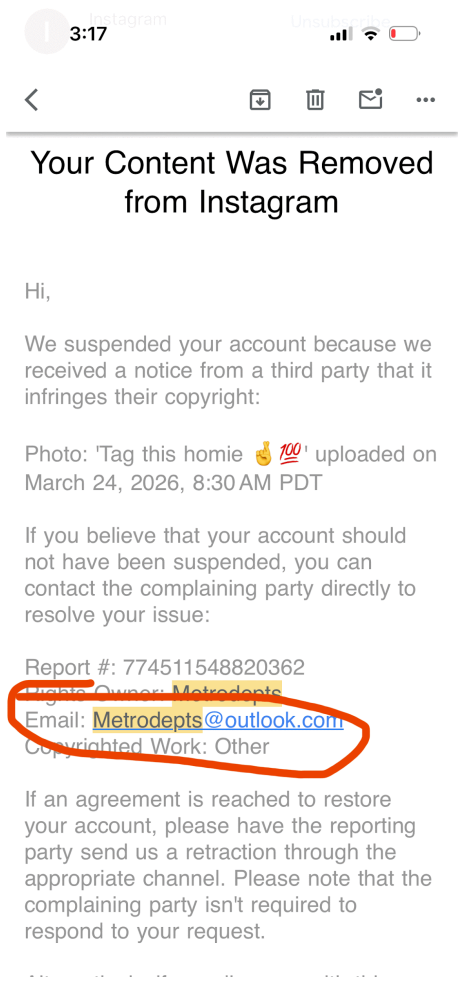

I have compiled documentation proving this is a scam, not a legal IP dispute, all included in this document. Under 17 U.S.C. § 512(g), I believe I am legally entitled to a formal and complete review of my dispute regarding these false claims that led to removal of my posts and three strikes against my account. In accordance with the Digital Millennium Copyright Act Takedown and Counter Notice process, Instagram must review ALL of the evidence presented, provide a detailed response (preferably a discussion rather than form letter); and unless there is proof that the claimant has ownership rights to the content in question, restore the posts and my account as they were before the false claims within ten to fourteen days. I am prepared to file a formal DMCA Counter-Notification under penalty of perjury. This is how strongly I believe in this case.

I am available on 703-283-5112 to discuss this situation, and answer any questions you have, so that we may come to a swift resolution including removal of these strikes against my account. Thank you.

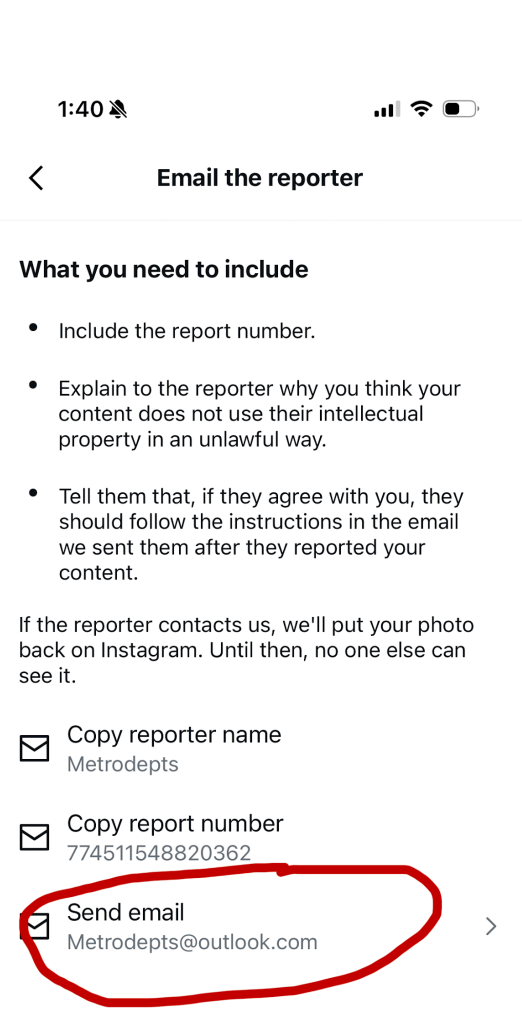

Screenshot Key:

- Screenshot 1 + 2: Showcases the correlation of how I got the original email of the complaining party (metrodepts@outlook.com)
- Screenshot 3 + 4: Showcases entire email thread with metrodepts@outlook.com, which ultimately pushed me over to Telegram with @gent0offical
- Screenshot 5 + 6: Showcases my desire to resolve this case with a retraction and the claimant's desire for me to pay $1k
- Screenshot 7 + 8: Showcases that the claimant does not own the photo that he filed the copyright strike on, despite my desire for that proof. This also showcases his desire to extort me out of money.
- Screenshot 9 + 10: In Screenshot 9, the claimant tell me explicitly that he will keep filing false strikes unless his ransom from the first strike is paid. In screenshot 10, he shows me proof that he filed 2 more false strikes from the email accounts snkultra@outlook.com and stargossip07@outlook.com, the exact 2 matching emails from strikes 2 and 3 in my timeline above
- Screenshot 11 + 12 + 13: Screenshots 11 and 12 showcase the email that my second copyright strike was filed under (stargossip07@gmail.com). Screenshot 13 was sent from the claimant to me (see screenshot 7) as a threat for filing more strikes after not paying the ransom
- Screenshot 14 + 15 + 16: Screenshots 11 and 12 showcase the email that my second copyright strike was filed under (snkultra@outlook.com). Screenshot 13 was sent from the claimant to me (see screenshot 7) as a threat for filing more strikes after not paying the ransom
- Screenshot 17: This is proof that the claimant changed his name on Telegram after filing false copyright strikes and attempting to extort me.
- Screenshot 18: Proof that the owner of the Tobey McGuire photo (IG: @antbeale)) has since given me permission to use his work. Also, this proves that the claimant doesn't own the photo, thus, is filing these false copyright strikes as an abuse of Instagram's "good faith" copyright system"
- Screenshot 19: Email from Instagram showing my appeal has been rejected

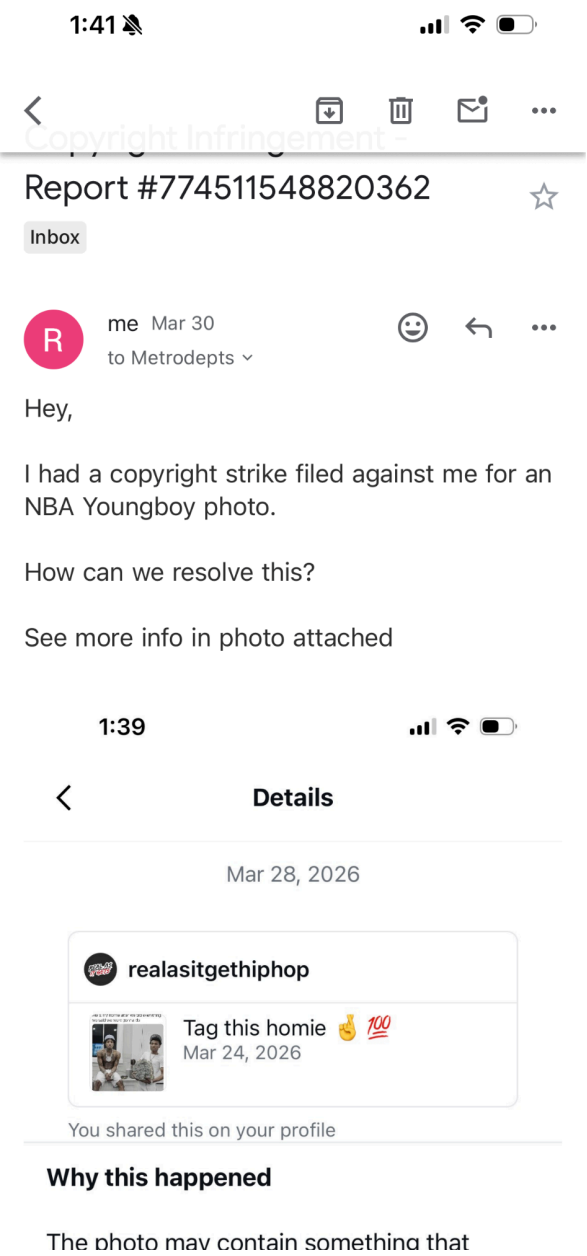

Screenshot 1

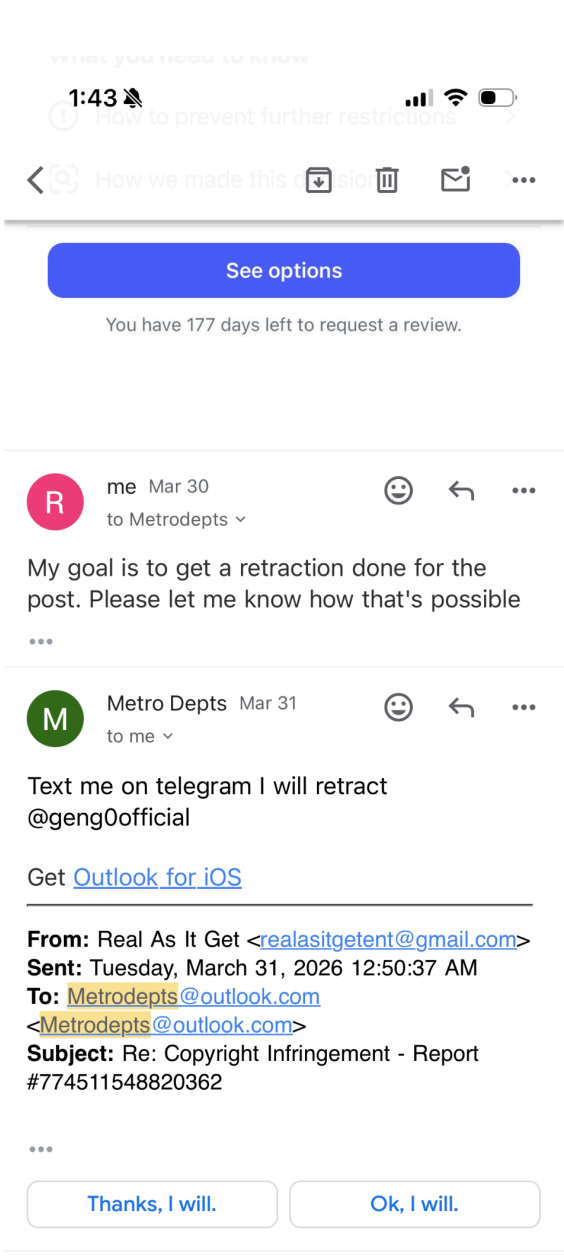

Screenshot 2

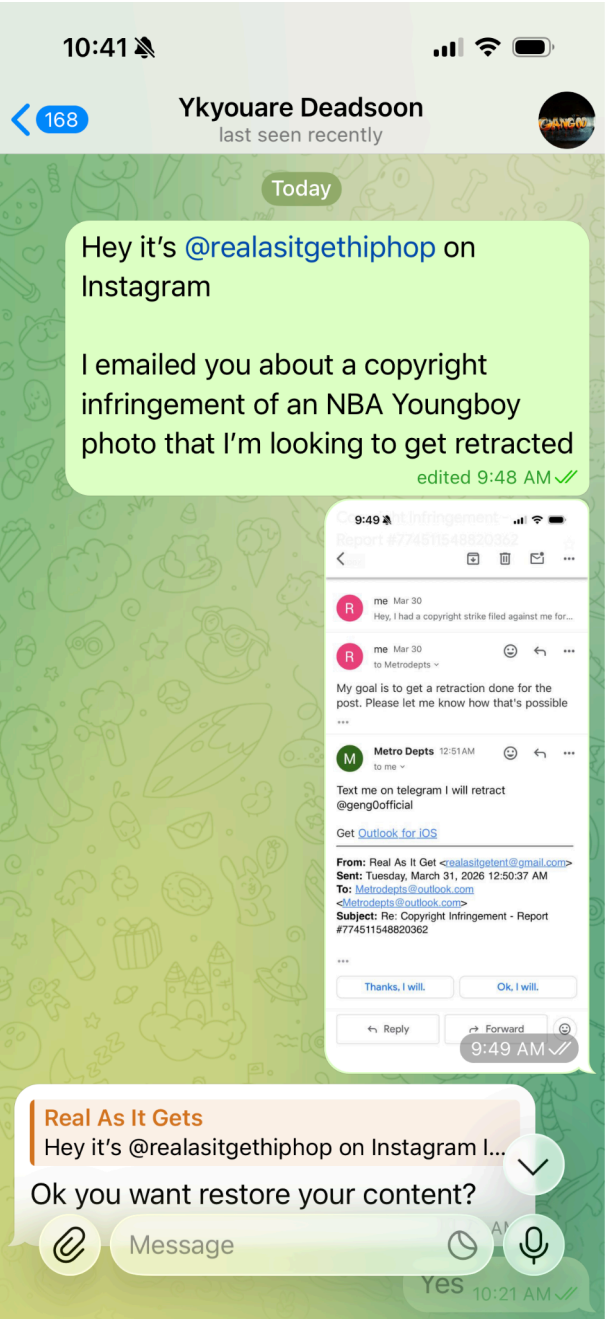

Screenshot 3

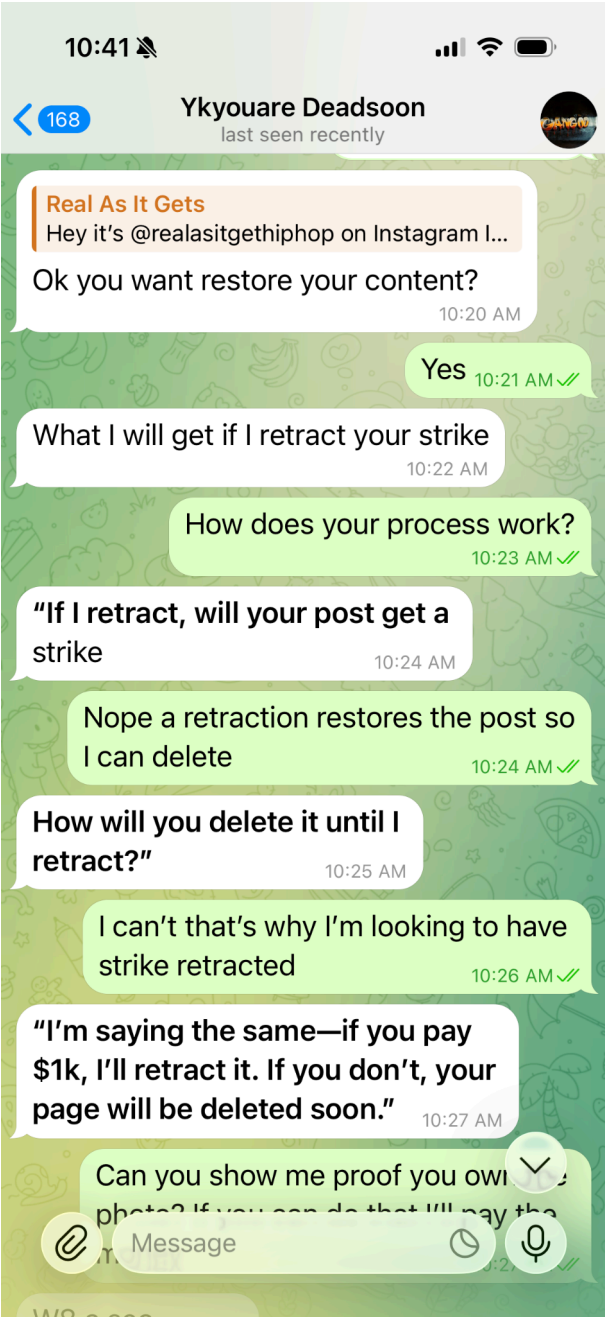

Screenshot 4

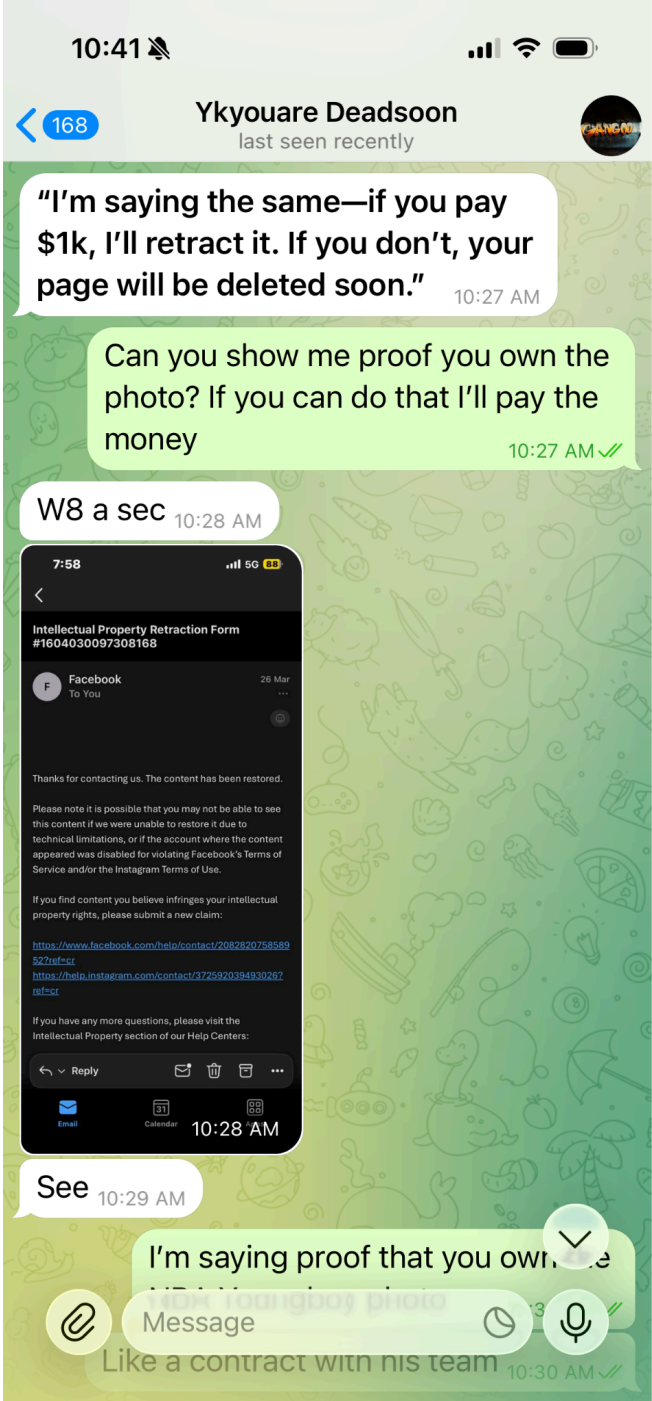

Screenshot 5

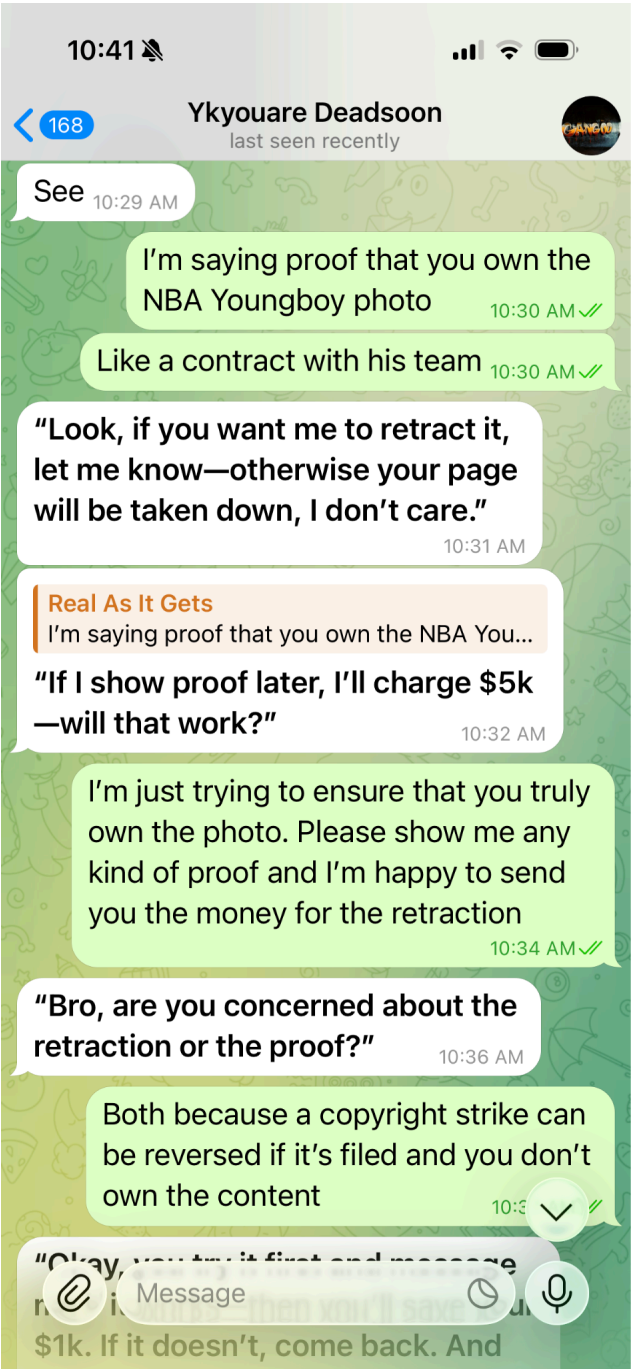

Screenshot 6

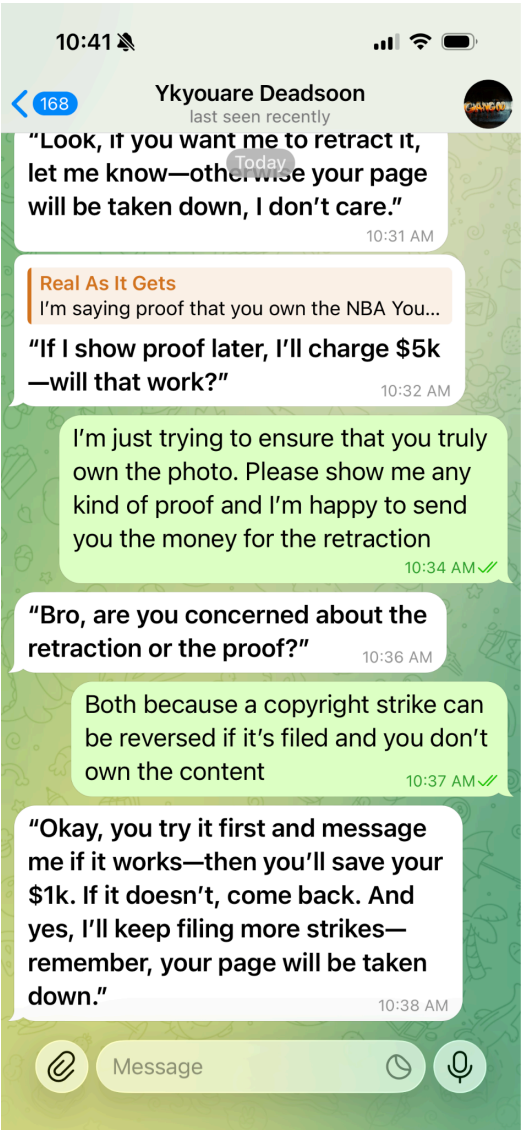

Screenshot 7

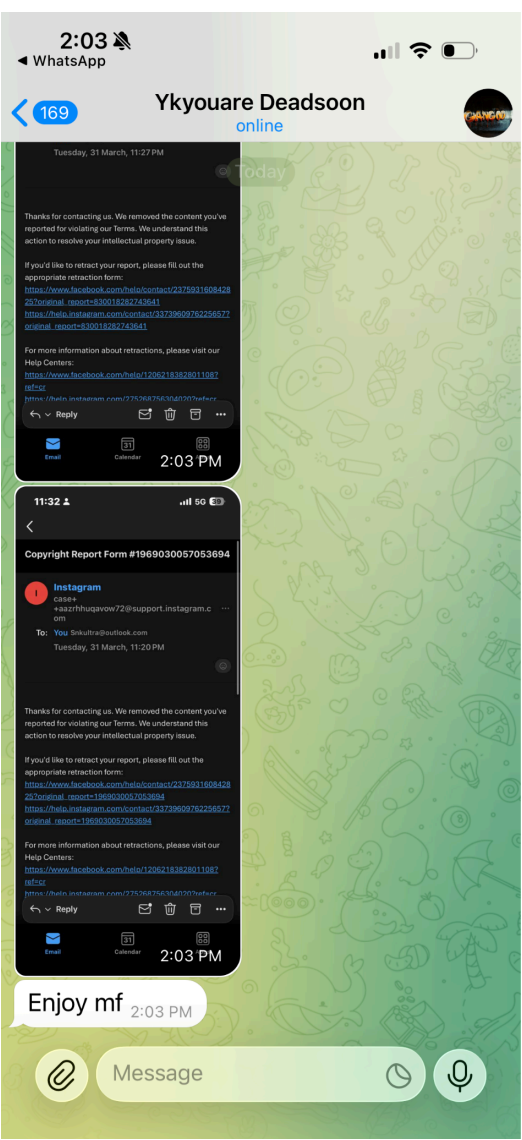

Screenshot 8

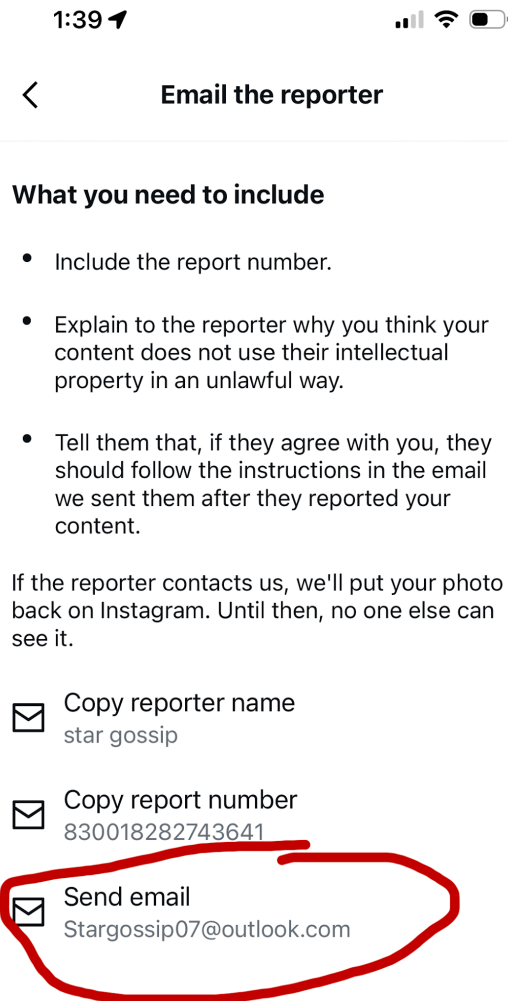

Screenshot 9

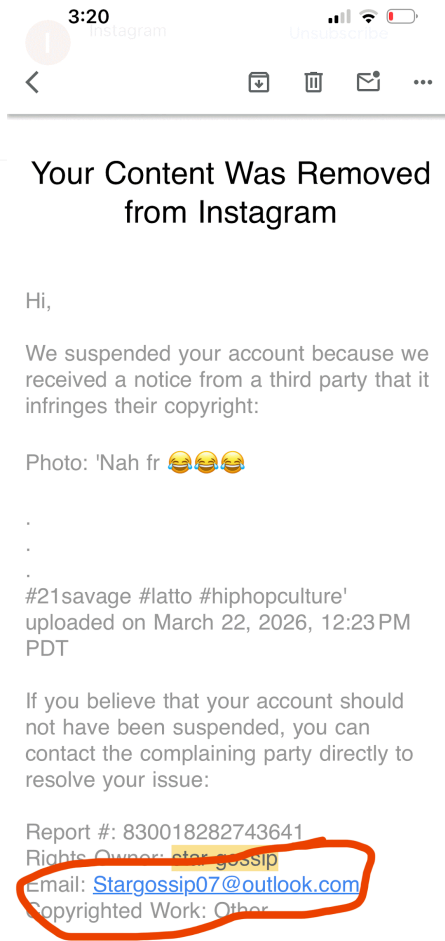

Screenshot 10

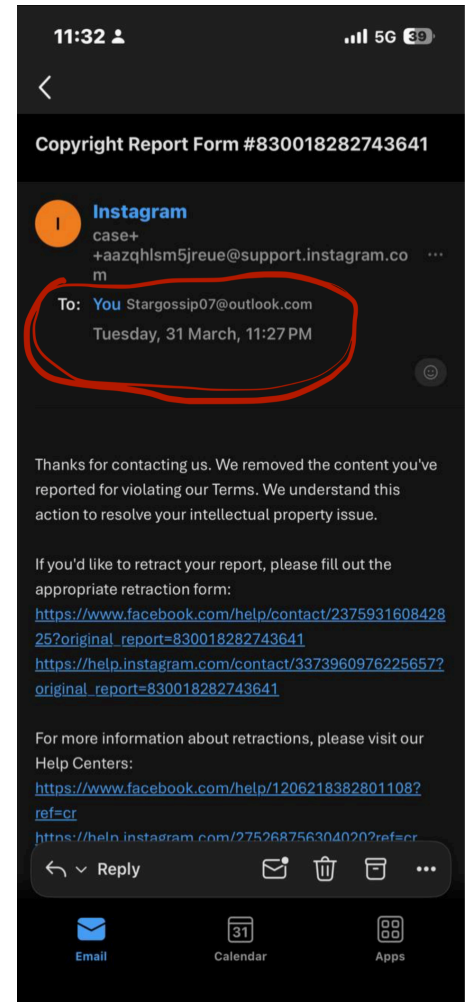

Screenshot 11

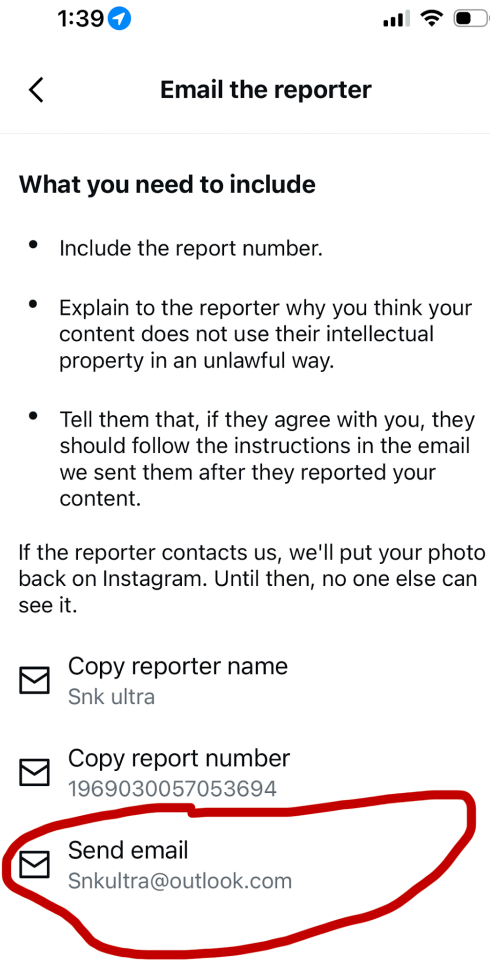

Screenshot 12

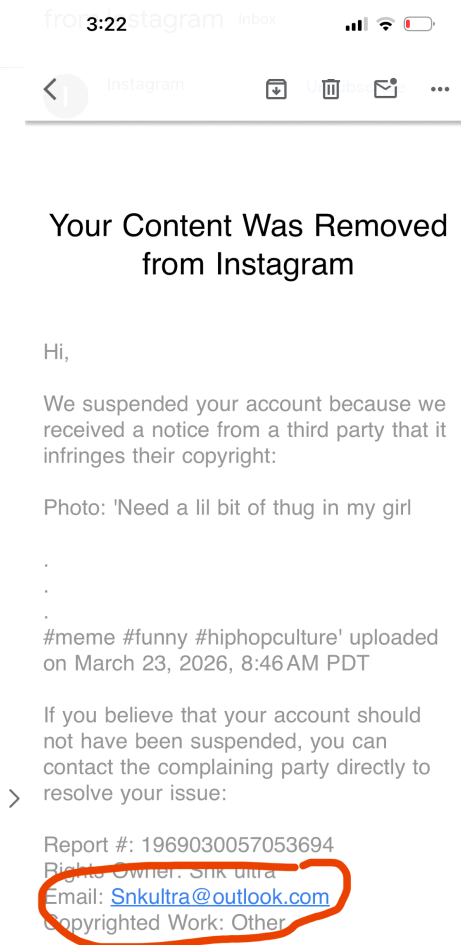

Screenshot 13

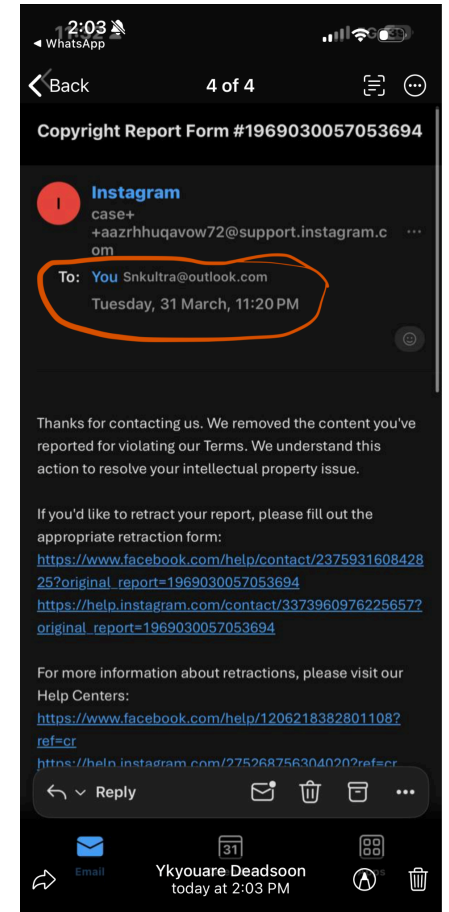

Screenshot 14

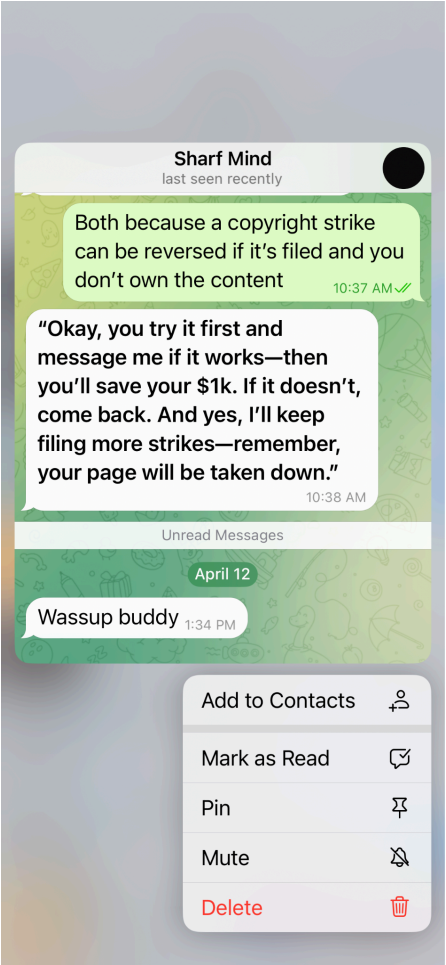

Screenshot 15

Screenshot 16

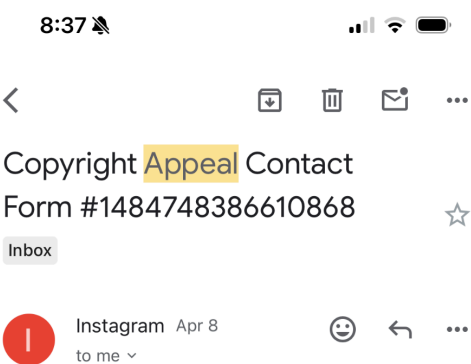

Screenshot 17

Screenshot 18

Screenshot 19

Thanks for contacting us. Based on the information provided in your appeal, we're unable to restore your content. You may want to reach out to the party who reported your post to resolve the issue directly with them. If an agreement is reached to restore the content, please have the reporting party send us a retraction through the appropriate channel.

If you have any additional questions, please visit the Intellectual Property section of the Help Center: <https://www.meta.com/help/policies/3234337743488413/?ref=cr>

Thanks,
Meta

>On Thu Apr 2, 2026 11:39:11, IG wrote:
>Your name (name and surname) : Ryan Henderson
>Email address : realasitgetent@gmail.com
>Report number : 830018282743641